* Located on the right side of the street behind/after Quad Graphics.

Air-handling systems are key elements for building comfort and air quality, but they use energy. How much energy? Fans can consume as much as half of the entire building's energy. Of course, the real answer depends on system configuration and control strategies. What's the latest? What are your choices? How can you optimize? Come and learn—Don't miss it!

Who should attend?

- We are focusing invites on our Design Engineering Partners

Why should you attend this event?

- Building owners are increasingly focused on reducing energy use, which creates opportunities for energy-saving HVAC strategies.
- Learn how to maximize LEED points through airside optimization.
- There are many types of air cleaning technologies, and deciding which to use when is often a challenging task.

What can you expect to learn from this presentation?

- Highlights of the latest initiatives to reduce building energy
- Air-handling system configurations and control strategies that reduce energy use
- Benefits and drawbacks of various air-cleaning approaches that are used to improve IAQ

How do you register for this FREE event?
